NotesANNUAL MEETING OF
RICHMOND GERMAN CLUBMost Exclusive Social Organization in Richmond in Season at Westmoreland Club.

One of the most important events of the year, so far as smart society is concerned, is the annual meeting of the board of governors of the Richmond German Club, which was held last evening at the Westmoreland Club. The Richmond German Club, and the functions given by that organization, are held in great respect by the social world and are the despair of society aspirants, since no debutante may attend any of the balls given by the club without first obtaining an invitation from the board of governors. It is the most exclusive social organization in the city and has numbered some of the best known and distinguished men in the State among its officers and on its board. Many beautiful women have made their first formal courtship to fashionable society at its balls and the fact that debutantes do or do not attend the first "Monday" is more than frequently prophetic of her season's success.

Following are the officers elected at the meeting last night: President, Thomas Pinckney Bryan; vice-president, Julien H. Hill; secretary-treasurer, George M. Reid. Executive committee, Colonel J. Lane Stern, Levin Joyney, Thomas E. McAdams, E. Addison Reynolds and Leigh H. Page. The first german will be held on December 14, at a place to be designated by the executive committee.

Art Club. Right Rev. D. J. O'Connell, Bishop of Richmond, addressed a large audience at the Art Club of Richmond yesterday afternoon. It was the first lecture of the season and the club rooms were crowded to the doors with members and their friends to greet the distinguished prelate. Bishop O'Connell's subject was "St. Francis of Assisi, and the Revival of Art." Right charmingly did he set it forth. He related in his own delightful fashion, numerous little stories and anecdotes about the life of this man—one of the holiest characters in all history, whose daily mode of living has been an inspiration of the ages.

The speaker set the scene of his story amid a soft Italian atmosphere. Little roads wound dutifully down from the apennines and flocks of sheep and little birds all formed a vivid, colorful background for the life and history of the saint portrayed. Just before the time of St. Francis, art was barren and enslaved under the Byzantine, when, all of a sudden—as the day follows the night—art was recreated. Ever-present felt a kinship of nature, and all this under the influence and holy life of this simple saint. His days were filled with good deeds towards all human beings and the very birds of the air flocked to hear his words. He gave a new interpretation to nature and looked upon it as coming from God, and therefore, full of beauty and joy.

Dante said that all art is God's grandchild, the world is God's child. All art should be a picture of nature and heaven and it was the subtle and far-reaching influence of St. Francis, of Assisi, that brought about the renaissance in Italy. Bishop O'Connell took his audience back in humble pilgrimage to the spot where the saint lived and was buried. With dramatic words and many touching touches, he sketched the singularly peculiar history of St. Francis, whose life and legend took such hold on the life and imagination of people that every one wanted to paint it. Under his influence art became natural, true to nature, portraiture. Instead of the queer stiff looking figures and faces of the Byzantine period, St. Francis' mission to this earth, and his message to all the world was to reproduce in himself, so far as possible, the image of Christ. He introduced the artists to the whole idea of nature and out of this simple, holy life, grew the great awakening of art that spread throughout the world. St. Francis has been spoken of as the inspiration of his time and scholars and thinkers date the whole artistic movement back to him.

It was a brilliant lecture, replete with the broad and scientific views of the scholar who made it. Rev. E. O. Good introduced Bishop O'Connell. The club rooms were decorated everywhere in bowls and vases of red and white roses and Killarney roses, dahlias and chrysanthemums decorated the hall. Serving tea after the lecture, were Misses Agnes Bull, of Paris, France; Elizabeth Witt, Eleanor and Ruth Houston.

Miss Lancaster's Wedding. Fashionable society was in full last evening to witness the marriage of Miss Katherine Dabney Lancaster, daughter of the late Robert Alexander Lancaster and Mrs. William Cabell Carrington Lancaster, to John Henry Guy, Jr., son of Mrs. John Henry Guy, also of Richmond.
